

THE PLAINS PLACED ON MAP

In Gala Attire They Turned the Keys of the City Over to the Mystic Shriners

(Communicated)

We have seen that brilliant constellation, Capella, the Kid, rise in the far Northeast and fling his charming rays of blue, purple and red across the frosty fields of a January morning—presently the gray eastern sky blazed with the glory of the rising sun. It was a formality which astronomy explains on the ground that the sun would have risen anyhow—and Capella's introduction could have been made as well by any other star. So "nemine contra dicente".

This modern city, located in the center of the Blue Grass section of Fauquier County, with its asphalt streets, concrete pavements, electric lights, water works, club houses, mayor and city council, on last Saturday night was the scene of gayety, hilarity and real enjoyment. The city was clothed in gala apparel and all legal restrictions and restraints were for the time abandoned. The occasion was one of much interest, it being the first time that the Ancient Arabic Order of the Mystic Shrine had ever gathered in Solemn Conclave in that section of the country, and this assembling of the Sons of the Desert in their Oriental gart and paraphernalia, with all their imposing pageantry and pomp. It was when the sun had retired beneath the western horizon, and twilight lingered as if loath to go, like a purple fringe on the dusty garments of the coming night. The evening was mild and beautiful; beneath a cloudless sky, the pleasure loving populace gave themselves up to the bewitching charms of the occasion; amid blossoming flowers and an atmosphere loaded with perfume, the light clothed landscape with dreamy fascination while the evening air wooed to ease and enjoyment.

It was under these peculiarly inviting surroundings, that the Arab's camels bent their course across the burning sands, and arrived at Mecca where they found thirty candidates for the slaughter, and as they stood in awe and dread of the horrible sacrifice that they had voluntarily consented to make in their pilgrimage across the hot sands, for they had seen visions of living creatures of fiendish shapes, in whose sulphurous waka an army of hobgoblins however dancing in the air, but they were told to put their faith in Him, who makes the winds His messengers and holds the sea in the hollow of His hand. They were told that after all the storm and works of time had passed, and the great company of the ransomed had gathered in the glorious light of eternity, it would be found that none who trusted in God had failed to escape safe to the heavenly shore, and their names would be found written in the Book of Life when the roll of the ransomed was called. With these admonitions and assurances they started on their journey. Following the Oriental guard Medusa Samosas, Homines, compescite curas, they were lead to the slaughter.

In accordance with the Potentate's royal proclamation advising the Faithful of the Mystic Shrine of the feast, and of the wonderful things in store for them, in language which only the initiate could comprehend and having called to his aid all the high and mighty nobles of his divan, and advising in unmistakable terms and language, which could not be misunderstood, all the weary and waiting candidates to make no calculations for the future, lest their mathematics be deranged by untoward and unforeseen happenings—thus the event of rare interest and unusual importance in the annals of the Ancient Order of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine came off as scheduled Saturday evening at 7:30 p. m., in the Town Hall at The Plains. Acca Temple appropriately commemorated with all the sacred solemnity due the occasion the martyrdom of the famous Hussein, which called for a human sacrifice.

There were many distinguished victims ready for the slaughter, and the perilous journey over the hot sands of the Sahara. Among the most distinguished individuals selected upon this occasion were Messrs. Landon Moffett, J. W. Murray, Maxwell Cockrill, Sandy Woolf Simpson, Walker and Kringer to enter the terra incognita all exquisitely groomed and redolent with the bucolic zephyrs of their native heath, when after solemn intimation of the dire consequences that were likely to befall them consented to immolate themselves upon the altar of esoteric curiosity, followed by a militant and belligerent host, prominent among whom were R. S. Cochran, Hon. W. N. Tiffany, J. N. Fishback, et al who sallied forth to meet a foreman worthy of their steel, in accordance with the time-honored traditions and customs upon occasions of this kind, the sacred Goat was especially prepared for the ordeal for which they, and the distinguished victims, who Mazepallike were lashed to his back, must pass on his way from the City of the Unholy to the sacred soil of the Great Oasis. They were in a vague way made aware of the mysterious uncertainty of their fate, and the dangers that beset their pathway in the grand procession, solemn rites, weird incantations, dances seldom seen, which would mark the solemnity of the occasion. Therepassed in panoramic view before their enchanted visions wan and dusky ghosts of the martyrs of the Mystic Shrine. Goblins crouched or every hand and specters danced in every nook, and serpents crawled and hissed with venomous sting and they saw in their wild delirium death and destruction belching forth from the cannon's mouth, mingled with the mellow rays of the burning incense, together with the signet ring, and its fiery impress. In their despair, isolation and loneliness, forsaken by friends and foes alike, they stood in awful agony, like Lady Macbeth with her hands dripping with the blood of King John, saying in her delirium "Begone, begone, thy foul spot" out still it remained all the perfumes of India could not cleanse her; and Banquo's ghost would not down at her bidding, but with burning whisp shod with fire and brimstone, the Sacred Goat goaded them onward until they cried "Veni, vidi" visions of Hades, until at last they awoke to the realization of the fact that they had passed through the Great Desert made the perilous journey and entered safely within the harem, clothed in the beautiful colors of the Mystic Shrine, yellow, green and scarlet the fez and claws. When at the hour of midnight was closed one of those enjoyable never-to-be-forgotten journeys across the Sahara Desert, the success of which was due largely, it not altogether, to the untiring efforts and energy of one of the nobles of the noble, Noble John T. Cochran, whose zeal and earnestness in the interest of Masonry in that community is only equalled by his modesty.
